I oppose permitting the export of LNG terminals. Because the so called "cumulative impacts study" so clearly neglects the long term consequences and the economic and social costs of intensified gas profiteering. As with all other fossil fuels, our first imperative must be to slow our use and reserve these valuable, one shot resources. Letting the market find the highest bidder will only serve to incentivise the rapid development and depletion of our domestic supply of gas. While this may lead to growth in the short term, it can only be at the expense of the local and global environment, and more importantly leave us without the energy we will need to smooth the inevitable transition away from total dependance on fossil fuels.
