To Whom It May Concern:

Virginia Governor Robert McDonnell recently commented on the NERA study that the U.S. produces enough natural gas to meet both domestic and export needs; and increased US natural gas supply could deliver greater geopolitical stability and national security.

As the Mayor of Warren, Ohio, I have seen firsthand the positive impact that natural gas development has had on our country, and more specifically, this part of Ohio. I recently became aware of a study conducted by NERA Economic Consulting that showed that if the U.S. starts exporting some of our plentiful Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG), we will experience significant economic benefits. The report contained very positive findings and concluded that natural gas exports would be beneficial for the U.S. economy extending far beyond the natural gas industry.

Sincerely,

William D. Franklin
