Dear Secretary Chu:

There are many benefits that can be realized by the authorization of liquefied natural gas (LNG) exports. We need to take care of the American people and stop giving money to countries that hate us. Getting into the world energy market is a good idea.

Living in Bellevue for forty-two years, I am happy to say that the economy is not bad in my community. There is a lot of building going on, Ameritrade is here, and we built a new hospital. I was an elementary school teacher for thirty-six years before I retired. Even though things are doing well here, I know there is still a lot of poverty in our country. We must do what we can to change this.

I was born and raised in North Dakota and still have family there. It is so nice to hear that their economy is booming because of the gas industry. Allowing for the natural gas industry to convert and export LNG will help people across the country. Our biggest concern should be getting people back to work, and this will do just that. Manufacturing needs to get going again, and many other industries will benefit as well.

Despite Representative Markey's letter to the contrary, you must listen to what the American people want. We are Americans and we need quality, stable jobs. We must also work towards a better economy. LNG exportation will make both of these things possible.

Thank you,

Lorraine Williams
